The humble Petition of SARAH BROMLEY a widow with two infant children and one aged mother solley dependant upon her for support having received sentence of transportation, most earnestly entracts that some commutation of punishment may be extended towards her, this being her first offence, and most solemnly declares she was driven to the confession of the offence by the crying necessities of her children for food - To remain in the Country with the prospect of being once more restored to her afflicted family is an much as she dare venture to salicit, and if this clemency may be ever conceded she will ever remember with gratitude and favour.
