The cause of this complaint was in my opinion, owing to wet and cold, the ship being rather in a leaky state from a Gale of Wind which we experienced a few days previously
	9	Mrs Bankin F.W. Table Bay Aug ^t 19 1828	Is an old infirm woman and being in a debilitated state I placed her on the Sick List, so that she may receive the benefit of medical comforts, all the medical treatment which she requires is to keep her bowels regular, being of a costive habit of body

		Ann Morgan (continued on the opposite side of the next page of journal)	Evening/ Stomach swollen and painful Injection retained but has not operated, extremities cold, pulse hardly perceptible at the wrist, Drink and cordials continued September 1 st Passed a bad night, no stool stomach swollen hard and tense, breathing laborious and hurried, features collapsed. At 10 o'clock A.M. died. In this case the symptoms were so evident that I have no hesitation in saying that both the brain and Lungs were affected and as my patient was a robust young woman I used the lancet freely together with other Antiphlogistic means, the effects of which were so favourable that she was (I may say) convalescent on the third day of her illness, however, having on that day suffered a relapse her symptoms became, in spite of all my efforts, daily more alarming until she died, and I am firmly of opinion that she must have received some severe internal injury from the accident already described, as there were strong indications of mortification during the last few hours of her existence

		June 13 th 1828	Vaccinated Euphemia McMullan's child aged 2 years, Same day vaccinated Judy Kelly's child aged 4 months both did well
		June 21 st	Vaccinated Jean Maier, alias, Dogherty's child aged 3 years who did well also. These were the only three children in the ship who had not been vaccinated previously to their embarkation, what remained of the \vaccination matter which I was supplied with, I gave to the Colonial Surgeon at Hobart Town O Sproule surgeon and superintendent

GENERAL REMARKS

Besides those whose cases I have given in my Journal I had a great many others to treat, but as their complaints were such as not to require their daily allowance of Provisions to be stopt I did not place them on the Sick List

I am happy to say that we had no infectious diseases on board (the Hooping cough excepted), during the voyage. The four patients who were attacked with fever between the 9th and 27th of August were exposed to the same exciting cause, (viz), wet and cold, and only that particular pains were taken to render the situation of the Convicts and other passengers as comfortable as circumstances would admit of. I doubt not but more of them would have suffered from the damp of their berths. The ship at this period had become leaky in many places and although the carpenter was almost constantly employed caulking and endeavouring to stop the leakes, she became still now more so as we proceeded on our voyage, and had it not been for the airing stove and an extra supply of beds and bedding which we had on board and which I ordered to be issued to those who were most exposed to the wet, I fear many more would have been attacked in a similar way, however, by keeping their berths well cleaned and ventilated, together with the other means already described, the exciting cause ceased to exist, and consequently there was a stop put to the progress of the disease. The Hooping Cough was brought on board by one of the free women's children which I was not aware of, for, at least twenty four hours after its embarkation, however, not more than six or seven children caught the complaint on the passage and they had it in such a mild form that they required no other mode of treatment than a dose of Calomel occasionally to regulate the state of their bowels. There were two still labouring under its effects on our arrival at Hobart Town, for which we were kept under quarantine for eight days.
